ICIAM 2007: minisymposium proposals solicited by August 2006

The Sixth International Congress on Industrial and Applied Mathematics, ICIAM 2007, will be held in Zurich, Switzerland from 16-20 July 2007. It will take place at the two adjacent central campuses of ETH Zurich and the University of Zurich. The old town is just a few minutes away.

Currently, minisymposia proposals are being solicited:

Deadline for proposals: 31 Aug 2006

Notification of acceptance: 30 Sep 2006

An ICIAM minisymposium proposal requires a title and a short abstract or description (to be printed in the program) plus a short justification, which includes a tentative list of speakers.

An ICIAM minisymposium consists of either one session (4 talks of 30 min) or two such sessions.

A participant may organize several minisymposia, but should speak only in one of them. He or she may also speak in other minisymposia that are organized by other persons.

The proposal has to be submitted electronically via the conference registration system, which is accessible from

<http://www.iciam07.ch/registration>

ICIAM discourages minisymposia in which most of the speakers or all the coauthors come from the same organization.

For additional rules and recommendations on ICIAM minisymposia see:
